SITUATION

Blyth is a large coastal town situated in south east Northumberland with a population of approximately 40,000.

Keel Row Shopping Centre is the principal retailing destination within Blyth town centre containing 18 retail units housing retailers such as New Look, Burton, Dorothy Perkins and Superdrug.

Blyth is a key location for offshore energy and renewables projects and the Port of Blyth has extensive experience in a variety of subsea and offshore renewables projects, from handling large scale turbine components and steel structures to mobilising complex cable installation projects.

The town is also home to ORE Catapult innovation centre for offshore renewable energy.

BRITISHVOLT

Britishvolt is on track to deliver a 30GWh battery Gigaplant, positioned on “the best site in the UK.” The mission is critical to help safeguard UK plc on the energy transition to electrification.

THE GIGAPLANT

The Gigaplant site in Cambois, Northumberland, close to Blyth, is without question the best site in the UK. Fully plugged into the national grid, ready to go, located next to an abundance of renewable energy.

It is logical to build any battery cell manufacturing site as close to a renewable energy source as possible, in order to counter the energy intensity of the production process.

In Northumberland renewable energy is plentiful. The entire area fully embodies the transition to a low carbon future. The county is a buzz of energy, and a proud home for Britishvolt's first full-scale Gigaplant. The site itself is a phoenix from the flames, having been the coal store for the former Blyth Power Station. (Source: britishvolt.com)

LOCATION

The property is located on Bridge Street, Blyth, which is approximately 16 miles to the north east of Newcastle upon Tyne, 16 miles south of Morpeth and 9 miles to the south of Ashington.

Blyth is accessible via the A189 trunk road and Richard Stannard House is located in the town centre accessed from Bridge Street.

The property is within close proximity to local amenities with public car parking facilities located directly behind the property.
